Momaday's mother is named Natachee Scott, and she and Al Momaday married and named their son Novarro Scott Momaday, but he reduced the first name to an initial and goes by Scott. For a brief period early in his career, before the publication of the birth certificate data in The Names, some accounts gave his first name as Nazaree, a confusion of the names of mother and son, apparently.

The Ancient Child by N. Scott Momaday: The Fictive Wish

The third part was a personal reminiscence by Momaday. The Ancient Child has four interwoven narrative threads: one is a Kiowa legend; the second is a bit of Western lore, part true and part myth; the third the story of a Kiowa/Navajo medicine woman; and the fourth the story of a Kiowa who was orphaned at eight, adopted by whites, and grew up far from the reservation and his people.
