Camo Netting is a loosely linked plastic mesh in camouflage colors. It is folded or rolled for transport and storage but expanded when put into use. Usual uses include concealment or decoration of valued structures/vehicles. It can also be set up to hide a hunter, as it effectively conceals the human form from potential prey.

Camouflage Netting is a rather crude and simple technology, consisting only of fabric webbing coloured to match the local environment and usually woven with local flora. A rarer version is composed of sheets of cloth covered in Cameleoline, a refractive chemical substance that can blend its colouration into the surrounding area.

Camo netting was introduced as standard practice by GLA forces following their defeat by the Americans and Chinese in Operation Last Call. All GLA defensive structures, including Stinger sites and Tunnel Networks, can be camouflaged with camo netting for a small price. This make them invisible except with stealth detectors.

Military camouflage is the use of camouflage by a military force to protect personnel and equipment from observation by enemy forces. In practice, this means applying colour and materials to military equipment of all kinds, including vehicles, ships, aircraft, gun positions and battledress, either to conceal it from observation (), or to make it appear as something else ().

A camouflage net, also known as a camo net or camo-netting, was a piece of equipment used to conceal ships. Some camouflage nets had a photosensitive surface that could capture, then display, an image. One might spread such a net on the ground and photograph it before deploying the net over a ship. This article is a stub about technology.
